Convicted Forger Shanghai's Sailor, Lands Him in Cell, and Escapes

(By Associated Press.) SAN FRANCISCO, June 18.—Peter A. Grimes, convicted forger in Shanghai, landed in the San Quentin penitentiary in California, Shanghai's sailor, Nagasaki, Japan, substituted the sailor for himself and escaped, according to information developed today in an investigation by federal officers.

Not until Johnson, in a cell at San Quentin, told his story to a fellow New Yorker was it discovered that an inmate man was probably serving the three year term of Grimes. Johnson, who does not speak English, told his story through an interpreter. He said:

"As soon as my ship, Nagasaki, I was in a saloon and drank with three men who approached me after two drinks with them I remember nothing until I woke up in a room between decks on a ship. I tried to explain, but no one understood me."

It was found that Grimes, under the name of James H. Rodgers, had served a term in San Quentin before, and was released August 10, 1913. Prison officials looked at Johnson and then at a photograph of Grimes, alias Rodgers. They were unable to recognize him, but they were clearly different men.

When Johnson saw the picture of the former convict he said: "That is one of the three men I drank with in Nagasaki."

Johnson arrived here under guard on transport ship. The transport officials are positive he is the man delivered to them at Nagasaki by Prison Keeper Kilgore, of Shanghai, as Peter A. Grimes.

While at San Quentin, Grimes, or Rodgers, was a private secretary to former Warden John E. Harte. He was an expert stenographer. His parents are said to live in Pittsburgh, Pa., and to be wealthy.

MILLIONS AVAILABLE FOR FARM MORTGAGE LOANS

Comptroller of Currency Estimates $500,000,000 in National Banks

WASHINGTON, June 18.—Comptroller of the Currency Williams estimates that about $500,000,000 in national banks throughout the United States is available for farm mortgage loans under the provision of the federal reserve act making it possible for national banks to make farm loans before the formal organization of the federal reserve board.

The estimate of Comptroller Williams is based on reports showing the capital stock and surplus of national banks to be $1,777,960,000. Twenty-five per cent of this amount, or $442,500,000 is available for farm loans. Furthermore, the federal reserve act provides that national banks may arrange farm loans up to 15 per cent of their time deposits. Banks with large deposits will be able to far exceed the sum they could lend on farms under the 25 per cent clause and the estimate of Mr. Williams is believed to be conservative.

Farm loans under this act are not to be made for longer than five years and the amount of each loan is not to exceed fifty per cent of the actual value of the farm offered as security.

Villa is not the first able leader who has been pestered by politicians.

Having lost a senatorship and two banks, Lorimer now has nothing left but his plety.

Colonel Roosevelt doesn't seem to be able to convince all the scientists all the time.

And still the Mexican situation is unsettled, and Jack London and Richard Harding Davis are there, too.

The Hope of the Constitutionalists.

If it were true that Villa and Carranza had broken company, henceforth to pursue conflicting courses, the Mexican problem would be more than ever difficult. United, the Constitutionalists will be a power for free and orderly government, but divided, they will be a source of added oppression and anarchy. They have presented heretofore a solid front against those influences and ideas that have held their country in feudal bondage. They have fought well and planned well, because they have fought and planned in unison, with an eye single to common rights.

Denounced at first as bandits, they have forged steadily upward in the world's good opinion, until within recent months they have won the confidence of foreign financiers as well as diplomats, and have been regarded as Mexico's hope of salvation. Their progress at home and abroad has been due largely to the fact that they have subordinated individual ambitions to their common cause; and on the continuance of this fact, their usefulness and power depend. Internal strife would reduce the Constitutionalists to mere wranglers, incapable of winning liberty and restoring peace.

It is not evident, however, that this misfortune has befallen them and the republic. General Villa emphatically denies that there has been a break between him and Carranza, and General Carranza is equally positive in disclaiming any serious differences between himself and Villa. There have been ominous reports to the contrary; but everyone who has tried to follow the developments of the Mexican situation knows how often rumors have been mistaken for facts, and what changes an hour may bring forth.

Certain it is that if either Villa or Carranza remain half as foresighted and astute as thus far they have shown themselves to be, they will permit no petty differences to endanger their common interests at a time when success is fairly within their grasp. It would not be surprising if such differences cropped out hereafter, but it is almost incredible that they should become serious, or remain so, at this stage of the revolution.

As for the reported pessimism in the peace conference at Niagara, it was only to be expected that the mediators would strike snags in their undertaking. The remarkable thing is that they have not encountered more difficulties. The present embarrassments may yet be overcome. Even should the conference fall in completely pacifying Mexico, it will at least have accomplished substantial good in making clear the policy of the United States, in giving force to the policy of the United States so far as Huerta is concerned, and in bringing about Huerta's retirement.

What we need is a perpetual lobby in the cause of right.

Colonel Roosevelt's political prospects will also be running up hill.

The Panama canal will not in the least reduce the high cost of Panama hats.

The doctors have ordered the colonel not to talk, but they can't prevent his writing.

The man who stole our umbrella during the drought is asked to return it now, and no questions asked.

A Charity's Appeal to Georgia.

Georgia is asked to give next week twenty-five thousand dollars toward the construction of a better and greater Wesley Memorial hospital. Atlanta has contributed a like amount, payable before November 1, and the greater proportion of it is now in bank. An appeal to the press of Georgia for cooperation in the impending campaign has been published by leaders of the work. It merits warm response—response that will stir the people to generosity; for, the purpose is most worthy charity and the opportunity is open for all to participate.

Wesley Memorial hospital is a Methodist institution in so far as Methodists are responsible primarily for its welfare and conduct. Yet it belongs to no denomination. Its charity is as broad as its capacity. It is open to any and every applicant for whom a bed can be found. Because the demands upon it have exceeded its limitations, the need has arisen for more room, more equipment.

A hospital like Wesley Memorial is operated first of all as an institution of charity. In order that it may be self-supporting as far as possible, sources of revenue are provided by the equipment of rooms where patients liquidate the cost of their own treatment and also that of the charity patients. But the balance cannot be maintained steadily. When the demands of charity grow to the extent of encroaching upon the sources of revenue, there remains a difference to be paid. The Methodists have been called that difference in Wesley Memorial hospital. The object of the present campaign is to enlarge the hospital to accommodate patients of both classes. Many are being turned away at its doors because there is no room for them.

It is not as if Wesley Memorial were a hospital conducted for revenue only. An institution of that type, admirably equipped, is a private business investment, a sort of hotel, with no obligation to do charity and with no claim upon our purse. Nor is the situation what it would be were Wesley Memorial a community institution maintained from public funds.

Unlike either of these, Wesley Memorial has no cause and no appeal but charity. Atlanta and Georgia share equally in that benefit and that obligation. Atlanta has met her obligation. It remains now for Georgia to give answer.

What Business Observers Say.

From that sharp-eyed, cool-headed, matter-of-fact journal, the New York Commercial, we have the following account of business conditions and tendencies:

Reports from correspondents throughout the United States indicate that the optimism which was apparent a few weeks ago has now passed beyond mere sentiment, and a larger and broader demand for many kinds of merchandise has resulted. The beginning of the winter wheat harvest and the growing crop reports have no doubt influenced increased buying, both in a wholesale and a retail way, and the trade of the largest centers throughout the country has been correspondingly affected. In view of the warm weather, a large section of the country jobbers have been compelled to place re-orders. More interest is also being shown in fall requirements and as indication of the trend of trade manufacturers of cottons and woollens are not inclined to take present prices, for future deliveries. Advances from the west state a semi-annual clearance of dry goods not only brought out more buyers but larger receipts than last year, while road sales also show a corresponding improvement. There are also evidences of better conditions in iron and steel. The transportation companies are showing more buying interest, new orders for 10,700 cars bringing more than 100,000 tons of plates and shapes to the plant. In the pipe line more activity is in evidence, and there is a better inquiry from implement manufacturers.

This is not the whistle of a man trying to keep his courage; it is a record of facts and conditions. It is in line with Judge Gray's recent statement, that such depression as we have had was mostly "sentimental," and with President Wilson's statement, that whatever uneasiness there may have been in business was largely "psychological." Is it not significant that the observers who are most broadly and thoroughly informed declare that the sources of business life are secure, and that an era of expansion and prosperity lies just ahead?

There are times when trouble mongers and calamity howlers can depress the country by sheer power of repeated wails, but this is not such a time. They had as well try to turn the sun to ice by fanning in its face with a goose feather. The fields are fruitful, the people are hopeful, the Government is watchful of business interests and as soon as the trust bills are disposed of, the ways for action will be fully opened.

Be careful when it comes to lending money or borrowing trouble.

If it wasn't for the weather lots of people would have no excuse for talking.

Did you ever think what a lot of good you might have done had you begun yesterday instead of waiting until tomorrow?

In winter the act of early rising is something between heroism and penance—a general sense, as Dickens remarks, of "getting up to be hanged." But, beginning in this season of the year, early rising is in the reward. It is a kicking of fars from the best part of the day, a skimming of the cream of life off the morning hours.—Boston Transcript.

The Conning Tower

BY FRANKLIN P. ADAMS.

TO CREOLE.
Koracai Book 1, Ode 23.
"Vitis binicola me amittit Chios"—
I speak, you say, oh, what is the Old time will grant me no impunity!
By Aphrodite and by Zeus
I'll make this verse my opportunity!

A year ago the crescent moon
Shone like a sword of light activity,
While three young men—ah, too soon—
Had started me down life's declivity.

When fourteen harvest moons shall rise
And light your bloom to full maturity,
For twice your age I put you on my list
I then shall be. Oh, certain sure!

Contemporaneous we might be
If time were paired with immortality,
But algebra and rules are three
We'd never win you in reality.

If mathematics be your line,
O midnight-haired, dawn-eyed Divinity,
The ratio of your love to mine—
Is that of zero to infinity.

Fly not! I am no beast of prey;
To hurry so is hardly my desire,
Love flings all formulas away,
And snags his fingers at senility.

"Do you think," anxious asks, "there would be any money in inventing a mirror that would show, before the job is done, how a haircut is going to look, instead of after?" Yes, a fortune. But Dullecia says that inventors never make any money themselves out of their inventions.

"Dullecia," confides H. H. H., "says she's simply no good in the morning until she's had her cup of coffee." And Dullecia says he's had a postcard from her. "Wish you were with us," it reads. "There is something to do up here every minute. I don't know where the time goes to."

DROP YOUR VOICE AT THE PERIOD.
(Received by a magazine agency.)
"Gentlemen: Since the beginning of this year, when I first started this business, in connection with my other vocation, as the enclosed card will indicate, I had been sending my subscribers through a larger agency here that I might save time and correspondence, but am now better prepared and wishing to deal direct with you people, also to give my customers quicker service, I would ask that you please state your best address on what address I may expect in a few days from a large concern here, also all others in the future, and oblige."

Leaving the American stage flat is vanishing the fly, and you were the actor (Conn.) Penny Press. "So, so I got all the things I thought it might have been—Judge."

"Whom have you been in tow?"
"This is Rip Van Winkle. He just woke up."

"Well, we're letting him see the women's styles gradually, don't you know?"

"This answer is wrong by 2 cents, go back to your seat and do it correctly."

"If you please, mam," said the youngster, fishing in his pocket. "I'd rather pay the difference."

The lecturer said impressively: "Every time I see a young man coming out of a saloon, I want to go to that young man and say, 'Turn right around, young man; you're going the wrong way.'"

Here is one that was told by Congressman William R. Tucker, of Missouri, the other evening when the conversation turned to the wonderful ways of little wifery.

Some time ago Brown, who lives in a suburban house, rushed into the kitchen where mother was busy preparing the supper. "What's the matter?" asked mother. "Is there anything wrong?"

"Where is that antiseptic 'Munier' he paraded almost roughly?" "That infernal parrot of yours has bitten a chunk out of his hand."

"What's that, Jimmy?" exclaimed little wifery, with a look of great concern. "Do you mean to say that he bit a piece out of your hand?"

"That's what he bit," answered James. "Clean as white as snow. Where was he when he bit you?"

"Oh, Jimmy," returned little wifery, "I don't wish you would be more careful. You know taste meat under any circumstances."

One day Jones burst a button from his serge coat, and on leaving for the office on the following morning he asked little wifery if she wouldn't repair the damage.

"During the day, little wifery, of course, sweetly promised."

"What are you, Harry?" called the young wife on evening. "What are you looking for?"

"Harry," said the young wife, "I'm looking for a button. You saw on that serge coat," answered Harry.

"No dear," came the startling rejoinder of wifery. "I couldn't find the button, so I sewed up the button-hole."

REMNANTS OF PAGANISM

BY DR. FRANK CRANE.
(Copyright, 1914, by FRANK CRANE.)

"Observe not," said Saint John, of the seventh century, in a famous sermon, waving his flock against the seductions of Paganism. "Observe not the sacrilegious customs of the heathen, nor consult their charlatans, seers, sorcerers or magicians; observe not their augurs or soothsayers, and when upon the road say no heed to the songs of birds."

"Let no Christian observe a lucky day for leaving home or returning. Let none pass attention to the phases of the moon when he undertakes a work. Let none light torches and make vows at old temples, holidays of Thursday; let none suspend from the neck, rocks, girds, padlocks or crossways; let none make of man or other animal phylacteries, even if offered by clerks and called upon for the purpose of curing diseases of Scripture; let none presume to make illustrations, nor enchant herbs, nor cause his flock to pass through the hole of a tree or a ditch of the earth, which is in some sort to consecrate them to the devil."

"Let no woman wear amber at her neck; let none howl during an eclipse of the moon; let none believe in fate, fortune, or horoscope."

"In case of sickness, consult not the enchanters, diviners, sorcerers, or soothsayers. Consult not charms at springs, trees, or forks of the road. But let the fountain be, and set down a tree that call sacred."

In its time the sermon was a very serious matter, a phylactery of art and science, and a phylactery of superstition. Today what strange drags it struts in us!

We are a little civilized and Christian at the top, but dark heathenism's heart still sits still what jungles of unacknowledged belief!

How we secretly fear Fridays and thirteens, and how we secretly fear the Little Shiver when a young ignoramus yells us that there will be a death in the family within a year.

We have driven the fairies and spooks and silly credulities from our cerebellum, but they linger in the corners.

After all our science the world we live in and the very soul itself are fringed with mystery. We have explored the globe, even Central America and the two poles, but there are in ourselves vast forests, fearsome mountain peaks, unexplored unexplored depths of superstition, and oceans over which no Columbus has ever sailed.

The little gods of other days still haunt us. All religions are the same, wide oceans of nonsense. Pale ghosts of forgotten faiths lurk in the back rooms of the brain. Wayward instincts underlie the will.

Today what strange drags it struts in us! We are a little civilized and Christian at the top, but dark heathenism's heart still sits still what jungles of unacknowledged belief!

Quips and Quiddities

"Why not?"

"Can you add small sums, girly?"
"Yes, papa."

"Can you subtract, too?"
"Take one number from another? Yes, papa."

"That's nice, dear. Now, let me hear you do it. Suppose I have five cents in my pocket and I killed one, how many would be left?"

"One," was the proud and sparkling answer. "The dead one."

"Theophilus, you know, is very absent-minded, and I don't know if he has any capacity for support. For that reason, Mr. Lloyd George is in as great danger from the suffragettes as Mr. Asquith himself."

But the women are not content with passing reports. They have a more direct way of showing their cause, but as he continues to hold office in Asquith's cabinet, the suffragettes say they prefer an honest position to a dishonest one.

THE BRITISH CRISIS

XXXVII—WILL WOMEN GET THE VOTE?
BY FREDERICK J. BASKIN.

LONDON.—As to the practical effect of the suffrage campaign there is much dispute. Making allowances for individual errors and dislikes, and errors of omission and commission from traits and demerits from falsehoods, the disinterested observer is forced to the conclusion that at the present time the women are losing ground.

For the first year or two of active militancy it is undeniable that the cause of women gained some political support. These gains were attributable to two reasons: One was that a great many men who were formerly indifferent believed that the women were badly treated by the government and, therefore, ranged themselves actively on the suffragette side. The second reason was that many persons who had always been opposed to woman suffrage now advanced to a moderate ground, and while denouncing militancy, affirmed that they were willing to give the women the vote if only the women would behave.

In the last six months, however, the excessive character that they have made few, if any, converts, and on the other hand they have lost the support of many of their former allies.

But in mind nothing was to be expected. The militant movement has met with stern disapproval among orthodoxes, and the cause of women has been more or less sympathetic with Mrs. Pankhurst and her lieutenants.

Some women, it is true, have taken a very active stand against suffragettes on account of the outrage against the cause of women, but their influence is realized by the frequent interruptions in the camp services, and they were shocked beyond words by the historic charges of one disgraced in the ranks by the "arsonettes."

It is difficult, of course, to predict any outcome of so unusual a campaign but from the suffragette point of view there is grave danger that they will bring about a deadlock, and that the cause of women will be lost to the courts of law and the jury's keys. That is the risk.

Dangerous as it may be for king or cabinet minister to appear in public without a guard of soldiers and police, it is just now infinitely more dangerous for the suffragettes themselves to attempt to harness a crowd. The same men and boys who formerly laugh and even applaud the suffragettes now work up to a fever pitch in the London in the extreme.

The London police are charged with the paradoxical duty of first protecting the wild women from the mob that would tear them to pieces, and then of arresting the women they have saved and taking her to jail.

It is no easy job. Many a policeman has come home at night with two sets of paradoxical wounds—one as a result of abrasions caused by sticks and stones cast by the mob, and another as a result of scratches and bites later inflicted by the lady herself as he bore her off to prison.

It is affirmed, and upon good authority, that the policemen are gradually going over to the side of the women. A policeman's business is the law, but his weapon is force. He respects force and knows it when he sees it. He respects the law and knows it when he sees it. He respects the law and knows it when he sees it.

Politically speaking, a question of votes for women cuts athwart the party lines. Conservatives and Liberals are not agreed among themselves. Mr. Asquith is in favor of the vote, but Mr. Lloyd George is in favor of the vote, but Mr. Asquith is in favor of the vote.

When the women are not content with passing reports, they have a more direct way of showing their cause, but as he continues to hold office in Asquith's cabinet, the suffragettes say they prefer an honest position to a dishonest one.

"BABY" SEWAGE PLANT BUILT AT BATTLE HILL

Tuberculosis Sanitarium Has
Most Unique Purification
Plant in the World

At the city's tuberculosis sanitarium at Battle Hill there has just been completed and put in operation what is probably the most unique sewage purification plant in the world.

It is a miniature reproduction of the big plants built with money from the late $100,000 bond issue, and is complete in every detail.

It has an imhoff tank, a sprinkling filter system, a filter bed built of crushed stone, and a sludge bed where the solids in the sewage are dried.

The purification plant at Proctor creek, which is typical of the three best known plants, cost in the neighborhood of $100,000 and has a capacity of 40,000 gallons of sewage every twenty-four hours.

The plant at Battle Hill cost less than $50,000 and has a capacity of about 100,000 gallons of sewage per day.

But small as the "baby" plant is, it is complete in the last step in making the sanitarium modern in every way.

The "baby" plant was designed and built under the supervision of engineers of the city construction department.

Grandson of Fred Douglass Comes to South to Collect Melodies of His People

The grandson of Fred Douglass sat amid the dust and brick-brace of a little violin repair shop on Peachtree
Thursday morning and played his violin to an audience held mute by the simple melody of "Swanee Ribber."

He was Joseph Douglass, recognized as the most famous negro violinist in the world, who is touring the south with the object of collecting and classifying
the folk songs of his race. "Swanee Ribber," the melodies of Stephen Collins Foster, the old slave songs and all the other wistful lyrics
the south has known for generations and which are rapidly becoming famous for their sweetness and simplicity the world over.

Born in Brooklyn, New York, forty-years ago, Joseph Douglass at the age of fourteen had begun to play the violin. In this he was encouraged by the old man, his grandfather, and by the time he was twenty was given the opportunity to study under the best masters of New York and Europe.

For ten years he has been known throughout the United States as a real violinist, a master. He holds a professorship in Howard university, an institution controlled by the United States government in Washington.

He has played in the Boston symphony orchestra, he has played before two presidents, McKinley and Taft, he has made his career successful.

And yet, with it all, Joseph Douglass has made his career successful. His unduly elevated him and his ambition is greater than the simple songs of his race that he is in the south. His presence in Atlanta was due to chance. He stopped here on his way to Alabama to have repaired a $1,200 violin, 130 years old, a genuine Steiner.

When Mary Badgett, whose little shop on Peachtree he entered Thursday morning, asked him to play while the violin was being repaired he was playing enough.

His audience was drawn.
So while Badgett carefully restrung
the old fiddle in one corner of the shop, Joseph Douglass sat in another, softly playing the songs of his people. First one and then another of the tenants of the building stepped quietly into the shop until, the last strains of "Swanee Ribber" hung sweet for a moment in the little shop. Joseph Douglass looked up to find he was playing to an audience.

They would not let him stop and so he smiled and played them over and again. "Old Black and White," "Hard Times Come Again No More,"
"Old Black and White," one after the other,
all the morning.

He told them that he might come back to Atlanta for a real concert later in the summer, in July perhaps, and there are many who heard him Thursday who will not fail to hear him should he play here again.

RAIN NOT TO INTERFERE WITH YAARABS' BARBECUE

Not Iced Tea and Cold Dishes,

Hot Stuff

of Thursday, those who were enjoying the nice hot viandas straight off the succulent Brunswick and the rest of the hot stuff that might be expected.

A few days ago they were stressing the presence of iced tea on the bill of fare.

Regardless of the weather, it was stated, they had to start right on the dot at 5:30 o'clock Thursday afternoon, in and around the pavilion of Colonel Walter B. Andrews, home on Peachtree road. Colonel Andrews, the patron, being president of the patrol, announced early in the afternoon that the feast was nearly done. It had been cooking in the pits since early Wednesday evening.

Orr and Jennings Reach Semi-Finals in Augusta Tennis Tournament

Two Atlantians In Semi-Finals

Orr and Jennings Play W. Waring and Bain in Augusta Tennis Tournament Today

Augusta, Ga., June 18.—Spendid games were made on the third day of play in the South Atlantic states tennis tournament, which began Monday at the Augusta Country club. In all, four semifinals have been reached, and two matches will be played Thursday between W. Waring, of Columbia, and J. K. Orr, of Atlanta, in the upper bracket, and with Hain, of Philadelphia, and Jennings, of Atlanta, in the lower bracket. The greatest surprise of the day was the defeat of Gary, a well-known local expert, by his fellow Atlantian, Harper, Gary is a veteran of the game, but this year he seems to be up to the form which carried him to victory in the doubles last year with H. H. Garrett.

Waring, of Columbia, and Jennings, of Atlanta, played Wednesday afternoon. The match attracted probably as much or more interest than any since the tournament began. Young Capers was the first game in the first set, but he was unable to come through with a victory. Although a wonder for a lad his age, he was unable to overcome the veteran from Columbia, who played a brilliant array of strokes, Bain defeated him a love game in the second set.

Probably the best tennis of the day was finished by the fourth round match between Bain and Goldman. Both played a lack-of-court game and an enthusiastic audience was treated to a brilliant array of strokes, Bain defeated the winner after two well-fought sets.

In the doubles Carter and Orr had a set line with Capers and Ridgely, winning in straight sets. The Atlanta pair is a sure bet for finals. If they win the championship, The Waring seemed a round by taking a defeat from a local star. Clark Waring, of Columbia, was teamed with Goldman, of Boston, but the pair were unfortunate in losing Atlanta's prize team and then they had a chance to learn each other's game the local pair had won.

Clark Waring won his first match in the consolation from Baltimore in straight sets. He will play Northborough, of Atlanta, in the morning.

The following are the scores for Wednesday:

First Round

Bain defeated J. K. Smith 6-4, 9-7.

Orr defeated J. K. Smith 6-4, 9-7.

Waring defeated J. K. Smith 6-4, 9-7.

Jennings defeated J. K. Smith 6-4, 9-7.

Second Round

Orr defeated J. K. Smith 6-4, 9-7.

Waring defeated J. K. Smith 6-4, 9-7.

Jennings defeated J. K. Smith 6-4, 9-7.

Bain defeated J. K. Smith 6-4, 9-7.

Third Round

Orr defeated J. K. Smith 6-4, 9-7.

Waring defeated J. K. Smith 6-4, 9-7.

Jennings defeated J. K. Smith 6-4, 9-7.

Bain defeated J. K. Smith 6-4, 9-7.

Swannham Team Pennant

June 18.—Swannham was the present in the first half of the South Atlantic states tennis tournament, which ended Wednesday. The team won a match of two games over Jacksonville, which team finished one-half game ahead of Jacksonville.

The three leading teams entered the final series of three games Monday. Swannham had a chance to win the pennant, but was defeated by a margin of two games over Charleston. The team was defeated by Jacksonville in the third place. Charleston also won its game, but Jacksonville won the third straight by Macon and finished in third place.

The second season opens today.

TODAY'S LUCKY FAN

SHERMAN SAID A LOT AND IT APPLIES IN BASEBALL

By JENNIS BROWN.

"War is hell," observed William T. Sherman, more than half a century ago, reflecting on the hardships of actual battle in which men are killed or wounded, and women and children suffer hardships and privations. Since that time this observation has been generally accepted as applying to any kind of open conflict wherein multitudes are arrayed against each other over any cause, of common ground.

When the Federal league burst into existence several months ago, and stars of the diamond began to buy from the folds of organized baseball to the ranks of the invaders, some sport scribbles found occasion to repeat the observation of William Tecumseh. Now, in times of real warfare those who are left behind and cannot take active part in the real battle suffer as much or more than the men at the front, with less chance of redress. And such is the case in the present baseball war, wherein the Federal league, and that force known as organized baseball are engaged.

Take, for instance, the case of the Southern league, a dependent in the household of organized ball. There are two cases that demonstrate fully what kind of a proposition this league is up against in this so-called warfare. Those of Kraft and Bland, herein comes the application of the famous saying with reference to war.

According to all the rules of the National Association of Baseball Clubs, if Bland can be waived out of the big league he must first be offered to the Atlanta club before he can be turned over to any other club lower than the majors. Now the American league wants to turn Bland over to the Indianapolis club of the American association in order to help build up a club there to fight the Federals. But Bland is rightfully the property of the Atlanta club, on record of the draft price, and his services would be worth considerably more than that price just now. Still the American league and organized ball want the locals to turn him over to the Hoosier club, as a war measure, although the Hoosiers are under no obligations whatever to Indianapolis and would have nothing in return. The war is hell, all right.

Against this the Atlanta club provided waivers on his services.

can be secured from the major league clubs. But Charles Ebbetts, who owns the Brooklyn club, which drafted Kraft, and the Newark club of the Federal league, wants to send the player to the Jersey club in order to stretch out his time for a better showing in a league race into whose attendance the Federal league is cutting in two cities. Remember that Kraft was the property of the Nashville club, was taken to the big league as a draft consideration, and that under the rules laid down by these same people he belongs back to Nashville if he cannot stick in the big league. Yet, after he is found a little light for fast company, the big league asks the Nashville club to donate their claim to his services toward helping the few fellows fight the Federals, when the Vols cannot hope to gain anything whatever in return. Again, war is hell.

The men who rule the destinies of organized baseball are a magnanimous lot. But their general attitude on all measures involving the expenditure of a few dollars in real money is that of "Let him do it." They frame the agreement themselves, to suit themselves, and then when they learn that by some queer turn of the game they are going to lose a few cents in playing square with the smaller fry, they politely but firmly request the little fellows on part of the major league to make an agreement that he would prefer to play here rather than elsewhere, provided financial matters can be adjusted. Sure, war is hell.

OLD SONG REVISED.
The Lion and the Unicorn
Were fighting for the crown;
The Lion whipped the Unicorn
All around the town.
And having whipped the Unicorn,
With many a lusty clout,
He turned upon the Eagle
And he pulled his feathers out.

You can say, in behalf of J. Bull, that even the Lion will turn if you continue tugging at his tail long enough.
For about three years or longer the Eagle has been tearing wide stripes from his hide. But forbearance ceases to be a virtue when there is only a patch or two of hide left; and the Eagle today is now wondering whether he didn't go just a trifle too far; whether he shouldn't have eased up a bit before rubbing it in to such depth. For the Lion, having turned, is now all worked up about it, and apparently doesn't know when to quit upon his own hook.
America enjoyed quite a spell in which to shoot the gurgling guffaw and the hoarse hoot over seas. She had about collected all the cups there were, leaving England nothing but a tin dipper and a musty gourd.

But, after all, it isn't what you used to be. The England of 1914 and the England of bygone years are not one and the same by several lengths—not to say furlongs. The spoofing now under way has its source on the other side of the Atlantic.
It was not so much that England grabbed these games, but the way she did it. Right under our own frontpieces she swiped our own stuff. She had the kick and the punch—the wallop and the batting eye. It was through no careful display of cagey generalship, but more from a rough and ready assault—a slashing pace, that Albion's entry came plugging through to glory. England upset America at the start with the same stuff America has always used against England—i. e., planting the first blow with a full swing upon a highly vulnerable spot. This is one of the greatest of all systems when properly employed—and unless these here U. S. wake up suddenly the cups she has been carefully collecting for a number of seasons will all be taken away within a year.

ENGLAND'S CHORTLE.
England has had a chortle coming for some time and no one can now begrudge her a chance to make merry.
The spoofing has already begun. Recently one distinguished Briton wrote to a countryman visiting on our shore:
O back from American bars
Fan summons you home on his pipes;
We don't blame you for loving the stars,
But what can you see in the stripes?

THREE DOWN AND THREE TO PLAY.
Since the polo emblem leaves us there are just three international openings left—Will Ritchie vs. Freddie Walsh, the Dalmatian programme and the yacht race. It will take a clean sweep here to give us any sort of chance to return the merry giggle, and it's no wall-eyed crouch that we can win even two of them.
For those who saw the polo match are in a position to know with what grimness England is going to battle these days. There's an atmosphere of desperate earnestness—almost one of savagery—in the way she is taking to wipe old scores. It took her a long, long under way, she is making up for a number of soggy epochs.

ENGLAND'S YEAR.
As an offhand or offside guess we should hint that 1914 is on the verge of being England's year. It looked like the same old smile when Gould beat Covey. But the first jolt came in April, when Oxford's relay team outspurred Uncle Sam's field.
The second jolt arrived in May, when England took ten of our ambitious young golfers and burned them at the stake.
And then on Saturday and Tuesday came the third successive wallop—a right hook to the left ear—when England's polo team rode our star array off the field—making us look quite a bit like the Yanks in a hand-to-hand grapple with the Mackems.

They say that polo originated in Persia, but we'll take Captain Cheape against the entire Persian nation and put the odds at 7 to 2.

Reyno

Try them and get the proof.

1c Cash Certificate in Every Package

This certificate is given merely as a temporary offer; you get more than your nickel's worth in Reyno Cigarettes themselves.

are the result of our 39 years of successful effort in the selection, aging and blending of tobacco. We started selecting the tobacco a long time ago to make sure that when Reynos were put on the market the tobacco would be thoroughly ripened. Only genuine imported French paper is used in making Reyno Cigarettes.

YOUR MONEY

Borrowing on Life Insurance Policies.

By JAMES M. McKEON

Within the last two or three years the life insurance companies have been preaching to their policy holders against the practice of borrowing money from the companies with policies as security. In its last annual report that company in which I was interested stated:

According to its statement my company has a better record than the other big companies.

The companies are quite right in urging policy holders to refrain from borrowing on their policies. Making a loan on an insurance company act as your bank is a mighty expensive way to finance your needs. Just as the Insurance policy ought not to be considered as an investment in the ordinary sense, nor the most profitable method of saving, in the same way it should not be regarded

If life insurance has any intrinsic merit it lies in its value as a protective measure. It is a good way to provide against possible loss of life or incapacity in the future, so far as your family is concerned. The whole business is so legalized and figured out with the thought that it is for the company's sake, is insurance. They are not the best agents for handling your investments; they can do nearly as well (through endowment policies) as the savings bank if you think of them as depositaries of your savings.

Buckley loan value of a policy and get the money at 5 or 6 per cent with a minimum of "red tape" you are forgetting (about one in five of you) what you meant to do when you took out your policy.

A lot of you who borrow on your policies are never able to repay the loan. This means that you have abandoned the theory that you owe some sort of protection to the women and children in your family; you have enlisted in the army of fatalists who say:

"Live today and let tomorrow take care of itself!"

Man Changes Room While Asleep, Thought He Had Been Robbed

When W. P. Parks, of Ty Ty, Ga., went to bed at the Blue hotel Wednesday night he was in room No. 15. When he woke up he discovered that his purse was under his pillow, that his clothes were gone, and that apparently he had been robbed.

So he called the police. Call officer Arnold responded and after investigation it was discovered that Parks was in room No. 15, right across the hall from room No. 12, where his clothes, his purse and everything else were safe and sound.

It is believed that Parks walked in his sleep, as he remembers nothing about changing from 15 to 12.

COLOMBIAN TREATY MAY BE AGAIN INVESTIGATED

Question of $25,000,000 Indemnity May Be Taken Up by Special Committee

(By Ralph Smith.)
WASHINGTON, June 18.—The Colombian treaty, which has been transmitted by the state department to the senate for ratification, and which proposes to the Colombian government $25,000,000 indemnity for the loss of such rights as she sustained in the Panama canal right of way, may be withdrawn temporarily, pending an investigation of the whole question by a special committee of the United States senate. The wisdom of this plan will be presented to the president by Democratic senators at an early date, and if it meets with approval, a resolution providing for the inquiry will be introduced in the senate by a member of the foreign relations committee.

The investigation would disclose the reasons which have moved the president and Secretary Bryan to submit the treaty and also the basis for the claim of Colombia.

It would remove much of the misunderstanding and doubt as to the matter. It would uncover the alleged scandal connected with the acquisition of the canal zone, for it would be necessary to summon Roosevelt and William Nelson Cromwell and others who figured in the plans out of which the acquisition of the zone grew.

Causes and influences that inspired and carried out the Panama revolution would be uncovered and the treaty would be better understood by the people.

Furthermore, the danger of it being an obstacle to treaty legislation would be removed. Its feared by senate leaders that the treaty contains before the senate said neutral in the treaty would be a debate that will retard the progress of already pending treaty.

A resolution calling for public debate in the senate, there would be no end to the discussion and interest in trust matters for the time would be obscured.

ACTOR ON TRIAL, CHARGED WITH ROBBERY ATTEMPT

Ed Marshall, Alias Rhymat, Accused of Trying to Rob Negro Bank Cashier

Ed Marshall, alias Ed Rhymat, a vaudeville actor, was placed on trial in superior criminal court before Judge Price Edwards, Thursday, on the charge of having assaulted the cashier of a negro bank on Auburn avenue with intent to kill him.

With Marshall's trial expected to conclude during the afternoon, criminal court will adjourn for a recess of several weeks.

Marshall, of Rhymat, was arrested on the day of the attempted hold-up and assault, in bed in his room on Williams street, the police claiming he was the fugitive who had eluded an exciting chase through the city streets.

J. C. Ross, negro cashier of the Atlanta State Savings bank, testified that on March 25 at 4:30 o'clock in the afternoon Marshall entered the bank and commanded him to throw up his hands.

When Ross resisted, said the witness, Marshall shot at him twice and hit him over the head with a metal weapon. The man was chased up Bell street by a growing crowd.

Trolley Conductor Dobbs testified that Marshall jumped on the Houston street car on which he was on duty, as the car was stopped at the next corner, the corner of Bell street.

The car stopped at the next corner, and Marshall, said the conductor, protested, begging him to hurry on, saying he had a fight with a negro and the crowd would deal violently with him.

Marshall tried to ring the signal to go ahead, said Dobbs, but he resisted it. The crowd caught up, and Marshall jumped off the other side of the car, running away.

Dobbs said nervous in the crowd told him the fugitive had tried to rob the bank.

Solicitor Dorsey and Bob Shropshire, his assistant, appeared for the prosecution of the case by John W. Moore, employed by the bank. Attorneys Hill and Wright appeared in defense of Marshall. The defense was a claim of mistaken identity. Marshall's young wife was in court with him.

A charge of attempted robbery, growing out of the attempt to hold-up the bank, was waiting to be tried also. It was expected that if conviction was secured in the assault case, the other charge would be dismissed.

SUFFRAGISTS TO VISIT LAWMAKERS JUNE 27

Resolution Will Be Presented Urging Enactment of Equal Suffrage Law

(By Associated Press.)
WASHINGTON, June 18.—Officers of the National Woman's Suffrage association, June 27 will leave for the south with resolutions urging enactment of legislation providing for equal suffrage. Vice President Marshall and Speaker Clark, with congressional committee members, are arranged to receive the suffragists.

The resolution which will be presented differs from others that have been taken to the capitol in that they call on congress to do that which is most vital toward equal suffrage instead of urging any particular pending measure.

The delegation will include Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, Miss Jane Addams and Mrs. Debra Brockbridge, and other prominent and vice presidents respectively of the national association members of its congressional executive committee.

ATLANTA AFTER NEW SCHOOL, SAYS CANDLER

Declares Methodist University Must Come Here—Is $5,000,000 Investment

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
BIRMINGHAM, Ala., June 18.—Asa G. Candler says Atlanta will go out to win the great university to be established by Southern Methodists.

"Atlanta is never far up on great institutions," he said, "and we will get the university."

He denied the rumor that he has pledged a million dollars to land the school in Atlanta.

Dallas, Tex., gets the Methodist university to be located west of the Mississippi river according to formal announcement of special conference of the Methodist general conference recently held in Oklahoma City, which met here yesterday. The commission was empowered to handle the situation growing out of the break with Vanderbilt university.

The location of the school of theology and the university to be located east of the Mississippi has not been decided upon.

The committee on location adjourned with a formal statement that it was open to bids from cities and towns and that all must be in the hands of Bishop W. A. Candler at Atlanta, by July 15.

Bishop Candler stated to a friend today that the university would ultimately mean an investment of $5,000,000 and that it probably would require a bid of $1,000,000 from the successful city to land the university.

The committee refused absolutely to give out any information as to its action toward the Vanderbilt university.

Better Parks Planned To Induce Tourists to Spend Money at Home

SAN FRANCISCO, June 18.—Plans involving radical changes in the management of the national parks were announced today by Mark Daniels, landscape engineer of national parks.

"Within two or three years the development of the interior hopes to popularize the parks for tourists and keep in the United States at least $500,000,000 a year of the $500,000,000 that is annually expended abroad by Americans," said Daniels.

Daniels is not out to make the parks more popular as resorts by attracting builders of first hotels through long term leases in place of present year-to-year leases.
